September 24, 1983, p.3 John's Vo-Tech teacher and he is very fond of his teacher. John and a Schermerham fellow are tree Shining stars of the class. Back to our west to the Hendrick plant: John's Jother (Jack) was on a break when we arrived and when he returned he was very pleased to have Job and I there to watch bein work. He is the Kend of person who "must" be surrounded by people at all times, and so the fact that we were there pleased him very much. We were given another tour of the plant and I asked a great many questions which pleased Jack liven more. It was all very lasy and anusing. John and I looked for some of the dies that John's grandfather (John Peter Buberniak) made but were not able to find any in the area where they are stored. John was very excited by the whole visit He showed me the plant with great enthusiasm - - he was as proud of the machiner and their Capabilities as if they were her own. He spoke of his to-tech training and of how he and his grankfather had worked together and how he had more or less promised bie grandfather that he would become a tool and die maker - - as his grandfather was. John appears to be forced - - by some strange Vo-tech requirement or procedure - - into another area, or at any rate, prevented from entering the tool and die area by curriculum requirements. When John spoke of the fact that it appears that he will not become a tool and Lie maker, be mentioned that he was troubled by that because he said be feele like he is letting her grandfather down I immediately pointed out that he sciould not feel guilty in the slightest and that I am sure her grandfather would understand. "I'm sure your grandfather would immediately understand. Were be aline today, he would be as proud of you as anyone who know you. It would give him such pleasure, for example, to see you standing here, in the midst of machiner that he knew well, explaining to me how toere machiner aperate. It would give him such pleasure to know that you are interested in working in metal, and that you will probably get the Vo-Tech award their year. You grandfather would understand. Don't ever worry about letting him down! My words worked. enstead of feeling guilty, John practicely had tear in his lyes. It was a very gratifying Conversation. It all took place in the middle of the plant - John's father and his beeper were working about thirty feet from his
